FRENCH RECALLING CRACK TROOPS

Envoys Ponder Chance Of New Soviet 'Red Herring' Across Big 4 Parley Trail

Molotov Seen Using Odd Tactics

Marshall Plan May Get Lashing

LONDON, Nov. 22—Delegates to the Big Four foreign ministers conference which opens in London Tuesday were speculating today on what surprises Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov may pull at this momentous meeting. It was recalled that Molotov caused a sensation at the opening of the last foreign ministers' council meeting in Moscow in March when he raised the question of the internal situation in China.

The possibility was seen that Molotov might attempt to bring up at this meeting the Marshall Plan, especially in respect to its application to Western Germany. If the Soviets believe there is no hope of getting an agreement with the Western powers on Germany and Austria at the conference, some European diplomats foresee the likelihood of Molotov attempting to use the meeting chiefly as a sounding board for Moscow's campaign against the United States.

ANY ATTEMPT on his part to try to delay application of the Marshall Plan to Western Germany pending a final settlement of the political and economic future of the German nation is bound to be blocked immediately not only by the United States, but by Britain and France as well.

Realization of this fact would not, in the opinion of Western diplomats, deter Molotov from raising the issue if he wanted to drag a political red herring across the conference trail.

While the council was created primarily for the purpose of considering the peace settlements with ex-enemy countries, it was also provided that "other matters may from time to time be referred to the council by agreement between the member governments."

Even if Molotov does refrain from attempting to raise extra issues in the conference, the possibility is foreseen that there may be informal discussions between the ministers outside the council meetings on subjects which have nothing to do with Germany and Austria.

For example, Molotov may wish to discuss with American Secretary of State George C. Marshall the question of a peace conference in regard to Japan, or the problem of Korea.

Minister Given Jail Sentence

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 22—Rev. Howard B. Pilchard, 64-year-old Ohio Methodist minister and field representative of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, began a three day jail sentence today for driving while under the influence of liquor.

Rev. Pilchard, who was described by League headquarters in Columbus as "one of our best men" when he was arrested Nov. 6, pleaded guilty to the charge yesterday in Toledo municipal court.

Judge J. Parker Edwards also fined the clergyman $50 and suspended his driver's license for one year.

Loan 'Too Small'

OBERLIN, O., Nov. 22—Dr. H. H. Kung, chairman of the board of directors of the Bank of China and former finance minister of China, held today that China will need much more than the proposed 300-million-dollar American loan. Dr. Kung, who spoke yesterday here, declared that there is little hope for immediate peace in China.

Swift Passage Of Tax Seen

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 22—Final draft of a proposed one-half-of-one-per cent Columbus payroll tax was before city council today.

Swift passage of the measure was predicted. As drafted, it would be effective from Jan. 1, 1948 to Dec. 31, 1952.

The levy was proposed to meet heavy city expenses, including additional costs arising when voters approved a 40-hour week for firemen at the Nov. 4 election.

The CIO, AFL and the American Veterans Committee have indicated they will seek a referendum vote on the measure.

More Veterans' Aids Promised By Rep. Rogers

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers (R) Mass., revealed today that she has launched a drive for the enactment of veterans legislation during the special session of congress.

Mrs. Rogers, chairman of the house veterans committee, has begun a series of conferences with influential congressmen in an effort to obtain a vote on four key pieces of legislation, three of which have already been passed by the senate.

The measures were approved by Mrs. Rogers' committee, but have been bottled up for months by the house rules committee, which has refused to give them clearance to the floor for a vote.

They are:
1. Automobiles for amputees. Existing legislation would be broadened to authorize the government to give specially equipped motor vehicles to veterans who have lost their hands or are blind. At present, only veterans who have lost a leg are covered. Mrs. Rogers estimated the additional cost at nine million dollars over a three-year period.

2. INCREASED educational subsistence allowances. Monthly benefits would be boosted from (Continued on Page Two)

Passengers Get Rough Ride

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Nov. 22—Seventy-five persons escaped today with a severe shaking up when two passenger cars of a Boston and Maine railroad train were derailed at Newbury, and jostled along the roadbed for nearly 200 yards.

Railroad officials said no injuries were reported. The derailed cars remained on the roadbed, and snapped off a telegraph pole before coming to a stop. Road officials said the derailment was caused by accidental locking of the brakes by a safety device.

Grange Lashes Tax On Co-ops

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 22—Delegates to the National Grange convention at Columbus were on record today as strongly opposed to taxes on cooperatives.

The Grangers accepted a report condemning "unjust taxes," and comparing tax treatment of cooperatives to that of "partnerships and proprietorships, which pay no taxes as such, but whose participants are taxed on the incomes they derive from business."

Other resolutions urged extension of social security benefits to farmers; inclusion of telephone service under the Rural Electrification act and elimination of overlapping federal departments.

LOSING HER EYESIGHT, Peggy Bennett, 5, of Titusville, N. J., gets an unexpected visit from Santa Claus in the person of Carl A. Gebhard of Trenton. A completely decorated tree was the main feature of the party given the child who, doctors fear, will be blind by Christmas. Peggy received many gifts, including more than $300 cash.

NO CORN SQUEEZINS

Sorghum Feud To End With 'Eat-It-Out' Test

HAWESVILLE, Ky., Nov. 22—There's a bit of feudin' brewin' today across the Ohio river.

It centers in the little river towns of Hawesville, Ky., and Cannelton, Ind., and probably will become known to all Kentuckians and Hoosiers as the Battle of the Bulging Waistline.

The issue is—sorghum — and who makes the best???

The principals are a Kentucky editor who took offense at an editorial published in The Evansville (Ind.) Courier-Press and an Indiana editor who republished the item in his Cannelton (Ind.) News.

War was immediately declared by Editor Roscoe Downs of the Hancock County (Ky.) Clarion at Hawesville, which he claims is the "sorghum capital of the world."

THERE WAS a sharp challenge—and an answer—and the rules of the duel were laid down by Editor Lee Huber of the Cannelton newspaper, who had such privilege as the challenged party.

He chose to "eat it out" on the deck of a ferryboat in the middle of the Ohio river. His rules:

1—The dispute will be settled on the deck of the Hawesville and Cannelton ferry, owned by an Indiana man, in mid-stream of the Ohio river.

2—The Kentucky editor will eat corn pone and Kentucky sorghum and the Indiana editor will have Hoosier biscuits and Indiana sorghum.

3—No corn squeezins are to be allowed for appetizers.

4—The winner will be adjudged.

'Unloaded' Gun Kills Woman

CLEVELAND, Nov. 22—A 31-year-old Cleveland woman was fatally shot early today in her home when her husband pulled the trigger of an "unloaded" gun.

Police said the husband, Arthur Paden, 32, was examining a revolver and pulled the trigger several times before a lone bullet in the chamber was discharged, killing his wife, Mary, 31, instantly.

Our Own Ted Isn't Happy

BOSTON, Nov. 22—Ted Lewis, as usual, hopes everybody's happy. But Ted himself, isn't.

Some low character, Ted reported to police, stole two clarinets and a trumpet from his locker at a downtown night spot. He placed a value of $1,000 on the instruments.

Pending recovery, or replacement, Ted is blowing borrowed instruments.

Poor Airfields, Ships Blamed For Accidents

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—The Civil Aeronautics administration said today that inadequate airports and poor aircraft design are the principal causes of plane crashes and near-disasters in airline operations.

A study of current aircraft problems, carried out by the American Institute of Research with CAA funds, pointed out that pilots are under the greatest pressure when they are landing, operating controls and navigating.

But, the CAA added that "pilots are handicapped in all three by inadequacies of both ground facilities and aircraft design." The study also declared:

1. The methods used by airlines in selecting applicants for pilot jobs are not successful in predicting subsequent success or failure during training.

2. Methods of judging pilot performance rely "more on personal judgment than objective measurements" and do not stress the factors which cause unsafe flying.

FROM THE STUDY'S findings, CAA recommended that "better ways" be developed for selecting, training and examining new pilots.

The institute further reported that the greatest number of "critical incidents" involving pilot behavior occur in the landing approach.

In discussing "inadequate ground facilities," the report said that poor airport lighting and the lack of approach aids, such as instrument landing systems, cause the greatest dangers.

The varied placement of plane controls, creating "non-standardized cockpits and instruments," was listed as the main fault of aircraft design.

Deficient navigating equipment, particularly poor radio reception, was given as still another major flying hazard.

Information for the study was obtained through interviews with 270 airline pilots, 42 CAA air carrier inspectors who examine airline pilots, and 16 airline check pilots.

Payne To Try Campaign Again

SPRINGFIELD, O., Nov. 22—Albert Edward Payne, the Springfield tool engineer who tried twice without success to win the Republican gubernatorial nomination, will try again next May.

Payne said today that he had asked Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel for petitions for "my coming campaign for the office of governor of the state of Ohio on the Republican ticket."

The Springfield industrialist's campaign will be based on a slogan of "old age pensions for everyone—even the taxpayer."

UN Panel Meets

HAVANA, Nov. 22—Delegates from 62 nations to the United Nations World Trade organization here convene in plenary session today to elect a president and appoint committees.

Living Cost Up 12 Pct. Past Year

Food Prices Force Index Upward

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—The government reported today that increased food prices continue to spearhead a rise in the cost of living, which has climbed 12.3 percent during the past year.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said that retail prices of goods and services purchased by moderate-income families in large cities rose 2.2 percent between mid-August and mid-September.

BLS reported that its consumers' price index, which covers the prices of virtually all items in the cost of living, reached a new record high in September of 163.8 percent of the 1935-39 average.

The index now stands 12.3 percent higher than a year ago. The BLS report revealed that food prices led the advance upward although the prices of all major groups of items, including rents, apparel and fuel, climbed between Aug. 15 and Sept. 15.

THE REPORT followed a warning by Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson that meat prices will be even higher next year because of a shortage in February, March, April and May.

Anderson, however, injected one favorable note in the food situation when he told the congressional joint economic committee that recent rains have (Continued on Page Two)

UN Expects New Soviet Veto Again

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 22—The Soviet Union is expected to wield the veto for the twenty-third and twenty-fourth time in a year today if the question of admitting Italy and the Transjordan to the United Nations comes to a vote in the security council.

The extraordinary meeting of the 11-nation body was summoned to meet a provision of the general assembly's resolution stipulating that the applications of these two nations be reconsidered before the end of the 1947 session.

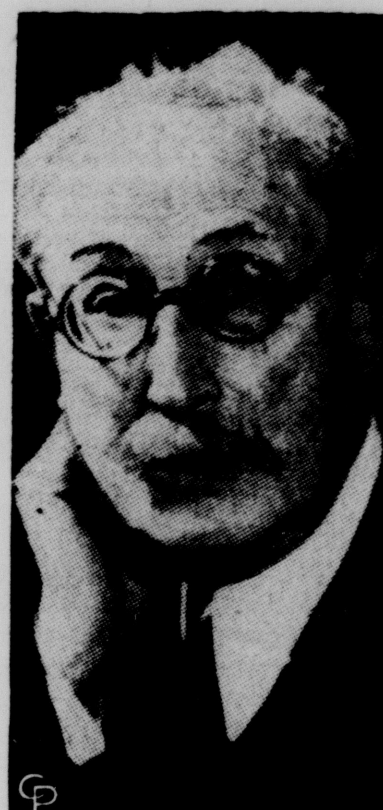

A hesitation among some delegations—including that of the United States—to force the issue to a vote today, may rescue the Soviet Union from the necessity of resorting to the veto.

The council is meeting concurrently with continued efforts by the Palestine group to reach a vote on the compromise plan for partition formulated by the U. S., Russia, Canada and Guatemala on the basis of the U. N. majority commission's report.

The general assembly cleaned up its long agenda last night and is marking time until the Palestine committee forwards a recommended plan on the Holy Land to it for final approval.

No. 1,000,000

CLEVELAND, Nov. 22 — Mrs. Anne Coron of Canton held the distinction today of being the millionth passenger to leave Cleveland airport this year. Mrs. Coron boarded a plane yesterday with her husband, Louis, for a honeymoon trip to New York.

LEON BLUM (above) lost position as premier of France after he blasted Communists and DeGaullists in speech yesterday before the parliament. Finance Minister Robert Schuman is now regarded as best bet for the premiership.

Arnold Brands Meyers 'Liar' In War Probe

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—Gen. H. H. Arnold, wartime chief of the Army Air Forces, today branded Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers a liar and asserted that on the evidence "a high-ranking officer has disgraced his uniform and his rank."

Arnold, on the witness stand before the senate war investigating committee, flatly denied Meyers' assertion that Arnold condoned his possession of aviation stocks during the war. He said:

"These statements, I brand as absolute falsehoods."

Arnold said the committee had developed evidence of "gross misconduct" by Meyers, who adopted a "kiss-and-tell" defense to charges that he used his office as an Air Force procurement officer to enrich himself through war profiteering.

WITHOUT REFERRING in so many words to Meyers' assertion that he set up Aviation Electric Corp. of Dayton, Ohio, to benefit the married woman he called his "girl friend," and her husband, Blieriot Lamarre, Arnold made it plain that he condemned such tactics.

The four-star general declared: "The evidence and the rumors and innuendo that go with it reflect on the three million men and women who served in the Air Forces, on the vital part they played in the war, and, perhaps, on the future of the Air Force as the foundation stone of national security."

2 Trucks, Car In Accident

A truck driven by Chester Blue, West Main street furniture dealer, was damaged Friday afternoon as it was parked on the left side of Watt street near Carperville.

A collision of a car driven by Walter Hatch, Dayton, and a truck driven by Fred Henn, East Main street, caused the Hatch car to carom off Henn's truck and then crash into Blue's truck. The right front fender of Blue's truck was damaged.

Henn was hauling lime for Leist brothers, Stoutsville.

Jim Davies Dies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—Former Sen. James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, who served as secretary of labor for nearly 10 years, died early today of a uremia condition. He was 74. Davis, known as "Puddler Jim," passed away at the Washington sanitarium in nearby Takoma Park, Md., where he had been a patient since Sept. 11.

Civil War By Commies Is Feared

Schuman Tipped As New Premier

PARIS, Nov. 22—Crack French occupation units were rushed back from Germany and Austria today to cope with impending Communist-led insurrection in the midst of a national political and economic crisis.

France is still without a premier although Finance Minister Robert Schuman, popular Republican, seemed virtually assured of a parliamentary vote of confidence if he accepts President Vincent Auriol's offer to head the government.

Schuman, a 61-year-old financial expert, was assured of a solid vote of support from Socialists and Radicals as well as his own "MRP" party.

In addition, he seemed assured of votes which Socialist Leader Leon Blum lost through his joint denunciation of Communists and De Gaullists, now regarded by Paris political experts as a major error.

SCHUMAN'S acceptance of the premiership was regarded as a foregone conclusion although up to mid-afternoon he had not so informed the president.

Highly authoritative sources disclosed exclusively to International News Service that the battle-trained veterans are pouring into France by train and motorized convoy.

The explosive French labor situation grew worse as numerous railroad workers walked out in the capital and other parts of the country. The number of strikers reached the million mark.

The action on the part of the general staff is the first part of a plan designed to frustrate reported Communist intentions to capitalize on French political and economic turmoil by fomenting civil war.

The actual number of troops involved in this movement is a military secret, but it is reliably reported to run into the thousands.

Royal Couple Finds Perfect Day For Mail

ROMSEY, Eng., Nov. 22—Britain's royal honeymooners got one of those perfect days today for staying indoors and catching up on the mail.

There was plenty of mail for them to read. Romsey's little red mail truck swung through the gates of Broadlands at 7 a. m. this morning with the first batch of morning mail in several bags.

There was a drizzling, wet rain in the little Hampshire honeymoon town and even the seagulls wheeling overhead near the 6,000 acre Mountbatten estate screeched their distaste for the weather.

But, Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh reportedly were enjoying the change after their outing yesterday when Philip drove his bride through the countryside in a jeep.

Schuman Tipped As New Premier

PARIS, Nov. 22—Crack French occupation units were rushed back from Germany and Austria today to cope with impending Communist-led insurrection in the midst of a national political and economic crisis.

France is still without a premier although Finance Minister Robert Schuman, popular Republican, seemed virtually assured of a parliamentary vote of confidence if he accepts President Vincent Auriol's offer to head the government.

Schuman, a 61-year-old financial expert, was assured of a solid vote of support from Socialists and Radicals as well as his own "MRP" party.

In addition, he seemed assured of votes which Socialist Leader Leon Blum lost through his joint denunciation of Communists and De Gaullists, now regarded by Paris political experts as a major error.

SCHUMAN'S acceptance of the premiership was regarded as a foregone conclusion although up to mid-afternoon he had not so informed the president.

Highly authoritative sources disclosed exclusively to International News Service that the battle-trained veterans are pouring into France by train and motorized convoy.

The explosive French labor situation grew worse as numerous railroad workers walked out in the capital and other parts of the country. The number of strikers reached the million mark.

The action on the part of the general staff is the first part of a plan designed to frustrate reported Communist intentions to capitalize on French political and economic turmoil by fomenting civil war.

The actual number of troops involved in this movement is a military secret, but it is reliably reported to run into the thousands.

Royal Couple Finds Perfect Day For Mail

ROMSEY, Eng., Nov. 22—Britain's royal honeymooners got one of those perfect days today for staying indoors and catching up on the mail.

There was plenty of mail for them to read. Romsey's little red mail truck swung through the gates of Broadlands at 7 a. m. this morning with the first batch of morning mail in several bags.

There was a drizzling, wet rain in the little Hampshire honeymoon town and even the seagulls wheeling overhead near the 6,000 acre Mountbatten estate screeched their distaste for the weather.

But, Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh reportedly were enjoying the change after their outing yesterday when Philip drove his bride through the countryside in a jeep.

Changes Jails

Lee Reynolds, who was released from the Pickaway county jail Friday after serving a fine of $100 and costs on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, spent Friday night in the city jail where he was charged with intoxication. He was released Saturday.

Busy Evening

CLEVELAND, Nov. 22—The Cleveland traffic bureau's "whoopie squad" wound up its night activities early today with 108 violators arrested.

occupation troops is estimated at around 60,000.

About 15,000 are in the French zone of Austria and the remainder in Germany.

THE REST of France's first class fighting forces are in North Africa and Indo-China.

This emergency recall order, coupled with the call to active duty of 70,000 conscripts, is taken as absolute indication that the government expects serious trouble and probable armed revolt by the Reds.

The general staff's decision to put its plan into effect was believed prompted by the reported order received by French Communists from Belgrade headquarters of the cominform to mobilize against the government.

In the meantime, President Vincent Auriol conferred with political leaders of so-called center parties in an urgent effort to nominate a premier.

Meanwhile, France's drastic strike situation mounted in intensity as Paris railway employees walked out.

As the toll of strikers in a wide variety of occupations mounted to the million mark, all rail traffic was at a standstill at the Lyon station.

North station main line traffic was flowing but suburban trains out of the capital were functioning at one quarter the usual volume.

Strikers outside of Paris blocked the tracks to prevent the passage of trains on some lines.

The two million candle power Hollywood beacon search light will be parked in front of the Cliftona theatre from nine o'clock Monday night and the huge light will remain in operation the entire evening. Dr. Banshee will be accompanied by his assistants and a host of spooks, ghosts, skeletons and evil spirits, all of which will be used in the show. For the Sunday and Monday features the Cliftona will have Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake in "Blondie's Lucky Day," and "Throw A Saddle On A Star," with the Hoosier Hot Shots.

$65 to $76 for a veteran without a dependent; from $90 for a veteran with dependents to $105 for a veteran with one dependent and $120 for a veteran with more than one dependent.

About one million, 750 thousand veterans would be affected by the increase which the Veterans administration estimated would cost 217 million dollars.

3. Higher on-the-job training ceilings. Monthly ceilings for veterans learning a job would be increased from $175 to $250 for single veterans.

The present ceiling of $200 for veterans with dependents would be boosted to $325 for a veteran with one dependent and $350 for a veteran with two or more dependents.

The Veterans administration estimated the cost at 150 million dollars annually, but other estimates have run as high as one billion dollars.

4. Comparable benefits for veterans with tuberculosis acquired while in service. This measure would give World War II ex-servicemen the same benefits paid to those of World War I. No action has been taken so far by either the house or senate.

Death Of Man Blamed On Gas Stove Fumes

Asphyxiation was given by Pickaway County Coroner Lloyd Jones as the cause of the death of John Irwin Twaddle, 72, who was found dead in his home, Fairview Ave., at 8 p. m. Friday.

Lawrence Kasee, 376 Walnut street, found the body when he called at the home. Mr. Twaddle was last seen about 4 p. m. Tuesday by his son-in-law, John Conrad.

Police reported the body was found in bed and that a four-burner gas stove was burning. It had no stove pipe to carry off the fumes, police said.

Mr. Twaddle, who lived alone, was born in Scioto county, the son of Thomas and Mary Krouse Twaddle.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Martha Heeter and Mrs. Ada Conrad, Circleville; and Mrs. Mary Clayton, Chillicothe; two sons, Elmer, Circleville, and John, U. S. Army; and 7 grandchildren. His wife preceded him in death.

Graveside services were to be held at 4 p. m. Saturday at Williamsport with the Rev. O. L. Ferguson officiating. Defenbaugh funeral home had charge of arrangements.

Death Of Man Blamed On Gas Stove Fumes

Asphyxiation was given by Pickaway County Coroner Lloyd Jones as the cause of the death of John Irwin Twaddle, 72, who was found dead in his home, Fairview Ave., at 8 p. m. Friday.

Lawrence Kasee, 376 Walnut street, found the body when he called at the home. Mr. Twaddle was last seen about 4 p. m. Tuesday by his son-in-law, John Conrad.

Police reported the body was found in bed and that a four-burner gas stove was burning. It had no stove pipe to carry off the fumes, police said.

Mr. Twaddle, who lived alone, was born in Scioto county, the son of Thomas and Mary Krouse Twaddle.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Martha Heeter and Mrs. Ada Conrad, Circleville; and Mrs. Mary Clayton, Chillicothe; two sons, Elmer, Circleville, and John, U. S. Army; and 7 grandchildren. His wife preceded him in death.

Graveside services were to be held at 4 p. m. Saturday at Williamsport with the Rev. O. L. Ferguson officiating. Defense funeral home had charge of arrangements.

others in finding it.

Regular attendance at the church of your choice is a step in the direction of achievement of the faith that will remove mountains. The beauty of wintertime may inspire the realization that God is always present. We have but to accept

Him and give ourselves unto His keeping.

Only then will the changing seasons, the shifting sands, the sun, the moon and the vast oceans fall into their proper places and assume for us their God-given functions.

THE WAY OF LOVE

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for November 23 is I John 1-3; John 21:15-22. The Memory Verse being John 13:35, "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another.")

LOVE is the subject of this lesson. Love to God first, then love to man. One cannot truly love God if he loves not his fellowmen.

In writing his first epistle to his fellow Christians, John says: "Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye have heard from the beginning." Since they became Christians they had known these truths that John now writes them; that is the old commandment that they have known. Then he writes, "Again a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in Him and in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth." God is that light, "and in Him is no darkness at all."

"He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. "He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him."

"But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes."

Hated Makes Darkness
How can one see, even in the shining light, if his eyes are blinded by that worst of all darkness, hatred? Cain killed his brother Abel because he was jealous of him, and after that Cain's life was all darkness. Our daily newspapers are full of accounts of men and women who hated someone and killed them in their anger. How full of darkness must these people's lives be after such a dreadful deed. They may obtain forgiveness from God if they truly repent, but they never can be truly happy. Even little children who hate a playmate know well how such a feeling darkens their lives, and only after they have "made up" with the one they hate, can the sun shine again for them.

Normally one loves his own family and relatives, but how sad it is when family feuds cut those natural family ties and make those who should be happy in one another's society into enemies. Love creates light; makes life shining.

In this epistle John calls these to whom he writes "little children." He addresses the older men, young men, and children, too, in this affectionate manner. "And now, little children," he writes, "abide in Him; that, when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at His coming."

How love could transform this sad world. Wars would be no more, for each would seek understanding of others, and settle their differences in that understanding, even if it meant sacrifice. If we truly love people, we want to give them the best, and forget our selfish desires. It is sad indeed, that nearly two thousand years since Christ was on earth, we still forget His words, which we have taken for our Memory Verse today: "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another."

Renounce Worldly Things
John also entreats these older men—fathers—young Christian men, and children, to renounce worldly things for the sake of their Christian lives.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world."

"And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

Do you remember the story of the Risen Christ appearing to the disciples on the Sea of Galilee in northern Palestine? They had been fishing all night with no results and were weary. He stood on the shore waiting for them. At first they did not know Him, but John recognized Him first, and He had prepared a meal for them on the beach. Once more He was with them in happy communion.

After they had eaten Jesus said to Peter, "Simon, son of John, lovest thou Me more than these?" Peter answered, "Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee. He said, Feed My lambs."

The sparkling diamond-like stars on a winter night shine with God's promise that other nights will hold such beauty—for those who seek Him while He may yet be found. Our churches and Sunday Schools are striving constantly to light man's way to salvation. Willing hands are ready to reach out and lift up those who seek the path to God, but who may need the help of others in finding it.

Regular attendance at the church of your choice is a step in the direction of achievement of the faith that will remove mountains. The beauty of wintertime may inspire the realization that God is always present. We have but to accept Him and give ourselves unto His keeping.

THE WAY OF LOVE

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for November 23 is I John 1-3; John 21:15-22, the Memory Verse being John 13:35, "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another.")

LOVE IS the subject of this lesson. Love to God first, then love to man. One cannot truly love God if he loves not his fellowmen.

In writing his first epistle to his fellow Christians, John says: "Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye have heard from the beginning." Since they became Christians they had known these truths that John now writes them; that is the old commandment that they have known. Then he writes, "Again a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in Him and in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth." God is that light, "and in Him is no darkness at all."

"He that saith he is in the light and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him."

"But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes."

Hatred Makes Darkness
How can one see, even in the shining light, if his eyes are blinded by that worst of all darkness, hatred? Cain killed his brother Abel because he was jealous of him, and after that Cain's life was all darkness. Our daily newspapers are full of accounts of men and women who hated someone and killed them in their anger. How full of darkness must these people's lives be after such a dreadful deed. They may obtain forgiveness from God if they truly repent, but they never can be truly happy. Even little children who hate a playmate know well how such a feeling darkens their lives, and only after they have "made up" with the one they hate, can the sun shine again for them.

Normally one loves his own family and relatives, but how sad it is when family feuds cut those natural family ties and make those who should be happy in one another's society into enemies. Love creates light; makes life shining.

In this epistle John calls these to whom he writes "little children." He addresses the older men, young men, and children, too, in this affectionate manner. "And now, little children," he writes, "abide in Him; that, when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at His coming."

How love could transform this sad world! Wars would be no more, for each would seek understanding of others and settle their differences in that understanding, even if it meant sacrifice. If we truly love people, we want to give them the best, and forget our selfish desires. It is sad indeed, that nearly two thousand years since Christ was on earth, we still forget His words, which we have taken for our Memory Verse today: "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another."

Renounce Worldly Things
John also entreates these older men—fathers—young Christian men, and children, to renounce worldly things for the sake of their Christian lives.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world."

"And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."
Do you remember the story of the Risen Christ appearing to the disciples on the Sea of Galilee in northern Palestine? They had been fishing all night with no results and were weary. He stood on the shore waiting for them. At first they did not know Him, but John recognized Him first, and He had prepared a meal for them on the beach. Once more He was with them in happy communion.

After they had eaten Jesus said to Peter, "Simon, son of John, lovest thou Me more than these?" Peter answered, "Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee. He said, Feed My lambs."

Three times Jesus asked Peter the same question until Peter was grieved that the Lord doubted his love. The last time Peter said, "Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee. Jesus said unto him, Feed My sheep."

Then, indicating by what martyr's death Peter would die, the Lord reminded him that when he was young he could dress himself and walk whither he would, but when he should be old, "thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not." It is thought Peter was martyred under Nero, Roman emperor.

AS GOES NEW YORK—

THE NEXT presidential election may be decided by the votes of two parties whose mere names are hardly known outside of the state in which they flourish. These are New York's American Labor and Liberal parties, both composed of parts of President Roosevelt's great following which did not care for the New York City Democratic leadership. They have developed considerable strength, most of it concentrated in Greater New York.

In 1944 President Roosevelt's vote on the American Labor ticket was 496,405, and on the Liberal ticket 339,235. As his plurality in the state was only 417,000, it is easy to see how greatly these secondary parties helped him.

Without the Roosevelt name at their head both parties fell off in the governorship election in 1946. But the American Labor party polled 425,000 votes and the Liberals 180,000, masses of votes well worth having. The Labor party is now rent by feuds between the left wingers, who are thought to include many Communists, and the right wingers, of whom the late Mayor La Guardia was the most conspicuous member. The most prominent Liberal is Adolf A. Berle, Jr., former assistant secretary of state. He says that the Liberals have just increased their vote by 30,000 over 1946, and his aim is for 400,000 votes in 1948.

The Liberals are expected to support President Truman. The American Labor Party's decision is unknown. Many influential Democrats do not want their support at all. On what these two parties do, New York's vote may depend, and it has often happened that as New York goes, so goes the nation.

NO MORE WALKING

THE END both of parking problems and of the need for human legs is seen in plans for modern many-storied office buildings with parking space arranged directly adjoining each office. The busy executive will arrive for work in his car, drive it up curling ramps to the next-to office parking space, step out to his desk.

It's as logical to rest the car in the office building during business hours as to store it overnight in a garage attached to the house. Many modern homes give as much space to garage as to livingroom. If the car, like the cows of European peasants, is sheltered under the home roof, why not under that of the office? Automobile drivers have nearly lost the art of walking, anyway. To cut the exercise down still more is only a logical development of the machine age.

But what we wonder is why the car should be required "to drive up the curling ramps". Why not drive it into an elevator and out at the right floor? Let's be practical and complete about these matters!

Those Britishers certainly know how to make the most of a royal wedding.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

In the November 17 issue of "The C.I.O. News" appears a letter from Philip Murray, head of the C.I.O., addressed to all members of congress. This letter contains a program for the restoration of controls over the economy of the American people by the President. It favors what President Truman himself referred to as police state economics. Murray's program contains four points which I here quote:

"(1) Re-establishing price control and rationing of food, clothing, and other necessities of life.

"(2) Instituting a tax program to recapture speculative and excess profits.

"(3) Eliminating margins on the grain exchanges.

"(4) Conducting an all-out attack upon monopoly and its attendant artificial curtailment of production, creation of scarcity for profit, artificial spiraling of prices and general strangulation of our economy."

This issue was out and Murray's letter was in the hands of members of congress prior to the delivery of the President's speech. It is important to note that in his speech the President made 10 points. Compare Murray's four point program with Truman's ten point program:

"1. Authorize 'consumer rationing on products in short supply which basically affect the cost of living.'

"2. Authorize 'price ceilings on products in short supply which basically affect the cost of living or industrial production and to authorize such wage ceilings as are essential to maintain the necessary price ceilings.'

"3. Extend and strengthen rent control.

"4. Authorize allocation and inventory control of scarce cost-of-living commodities.

"5. Authorize regulation of speculative trading on commodity exchanges.

"6. Restore consumer credit controls and restrain inflationary bank credit.

"7. Extend and strengthen export controls.

"8. Continue authority to allocate transportation facilities and equipment.

"9. Provide measures to induce livestock and poultry marketing so as to obtain the most efficient use of grain.

"10. Allow the Agriculture Department to expand a program for encouraging conservation practices and authorize measures intended to step up foreign food production."

They look very close to each other. They look as though they had a common inspiration. The President, for instance, says:

"The harsh effects of price inflation are clear. They are felt by wage earners, farmers and businessmen. Wage earners are finding that bigger pay checks this year buy less than smaller pay checks bought last year. Despite generalities about high farm prices, the income of many farm families cannot keep up with the rising costs of the things they buy. Small businessmen are being squeezed by rising costs. Even those who are well off are asking: 'How long can it last? When is the break coming?'"

But the President does not say anywhere in his speech that his administration, operating by his decisions, is increasing inflation by purchasing scarce commodities for export abroad. The government still exercises priorities—"moral priorities"—namely that government orders come first. As long as that is so, inflation must continue while goods are scarce. In a word, as long as the government, by its economic policies and its purchases, makes

What Causes Foot Trouble

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WOMEN are often said to invite foot trouble by the shoes they wear. Whether this is true or not, the fact remains that painful feet are far more common among women than men.

A great many women have the idea that their feet would be "all right" if only they could get rid of certain bunions, calluses, or corns, and the doctor often has difficulty in explaining to them that, like pain in all such things are the result of foot strain and not the cause of it.

The First Step

Thus, the first step in the treatment of aching feet is to find the cause of the strain. Far more often than most people realize, strain and hence, pain are due to some inherited abnormality in the structure of the feet.

Among these abnormalities, perhaps the first in importance is shortness of the first metatarsal bone. The metatarsal bones are those just behind the toes. Sometimes, what are known as sesamoid bones are present in the foot. These are loose bits of bone, but just why they develop is not known.

Short Heel Cord

Another abnormality is a short heel cord. This causes the ankle bone to turn outward. If the first metatarsal bone is short or is not retained in the normal position, the ankle bone may roll inward and the foot may turn outward. In such cases, the arches of the feet may be high.

An X-ray of the feet, taken from the side, will help to show these various abnormalities. Once an abnormal condition is detected, the best treatment can be carried out.

Treatment, of course, includes the wearing of the proper shoe. This should be a wide, flexible shoe with a narrow insole around the heel. The heel of the shoe should not be more than one and one-half inches high. A felt, rubber, or soft leather pad may be put in the front part of the shoe to give support to the first metatarsal bone. Heat, massage, and stretching exercises will increase the flexibility of the feet, and help to overcome pain and other symptoms.

Surgical Removal

Bunions, if they are present, may be removed surgically.

Many of these defects in the feet can be detected in infancy. In treating some of them, it may be necessary to put on a cast which is worn for several months. If the condition is severe, it may be necessary for the cast to be worn until the proper kind of shoe can be fitted.

Of course, the longer these foot defects are allowed to continue untreated, the worse the foot strain becomes, and the more difficult it is to correct the condition later on. Hence, it is important that the baby's feet be carefully examined and, if there is any indication of abnormalities, X-rays should be taken. Later on in life, the person must take care to wear the proper shoes, so that foot strain may be completely prevented.

SYNOPSIS

Cathy Layne, Army nurse, was disappointed when Bill Kendall, with whom she had been in love since childhood, failed to meet her when she arrived home on leave after long service in the Pacific. Aunt Maggie, with whom Cathy lived, disclosed that Edith Kendall, Bill's wealthy, arrogant aunt, had sent him on a short business trip, and had undoubtedly failed to give him the telegram Cathy had sent announcing the time of her arrival.

CHAPTER TWO

"LOOK FAMILIAR?" suggested Aunt Maggie wryly, and jerked an inelegant thumb towards the house.

"Very impressive," said Cathy dryly.

"The Dowager Queen would be happy to hear you say that," said Aunt Maggie. "She's had herself a time throwing her weight around, with the mills all broke down, just about, with war contracts, and the town bursting at the seams with war workers. Folks say she's made so much money that it would take a coal scoop to handle it."

"That's nice," said Cathy.

"What wonders me," said Aunt Maggie as the Betsy-Bug scampered past the impressive fieldstone fence with its grilled iron gates, "is how Bill stands living here. Like living in a jail—Oh, of course, with all modern improvements. But a jail just the same."

Cathy hesitated. "Well, I suppose he feels under obligation to her. After all, she did adopt him when he was fifteen, and gave him every possible advantage. And he and his mother had a terrible time."

"Sure, sure—but if Edith Kendall could be made to remember that Abe Lincoln freed the slaves," said Aunt Maggie.

Cathy laughed unsteadily. "Darling, I'm beginning to suspect that you don't like Mrs. William Kendall too much," she said teasingly.

"Like her? Does anybody?" snorted Aunt Maggie. "Anyway, she'd resent it furiously if anybody dared to like her. She's much too important to be liked. She wants to be like Ben Bolt's Sweet Alice—she wants people to tremble with fear at her frown and weep with delight at her smile. She wants to be known as the Lady Bountiful of the Manor—provided she doesn't have to spend more than a dollar and a quarter befriending the poor."

The Betsy-Bug had left the yellow brick with its imposing grounds and was progressing steadily, if not speedily, a mile or so beyond, to where several cottages faced each other along the highway, each with its own garden plot and half an acre or so of arm land.

A neat white picket fence enclosed one of these. It was a trim white cottage, freshly painted, its deep in blossoming shrubbery, its walk and drive blazing with spring flowers, the orchard at the back hung with scarves of palest pink and creamy white.

Aunt Maggie turned the Betsy-Bug's blunt nose through the ate, drove along to the back of the house, and heaved a sigh of relief as she pried herself from behind the wheel.

"I'm either going to have to diet or stop trying to drive," she said comfortably as she had said a thousand times before. "I starve myself, drop a few pounds—and then I laugh it back on again!"

"If you lose so much as an ounce, I'll sue you," Cathy threatened. "You're just exactly the way I want you, darling!"

"Then I'll make an apple pie for supper, with lots of cinnamon and sugar," said Aunt Maggie cheerfully, and put her arm about the girl and held her close. "It's good to have you home again, chick."

"It's good to be here, darling. I used to dream of the place—and of you." Cathy kissed the plump cheek and looked about her. "But you're terribly spruced up, darling. Fresh paint and the pickets all in the place."

"Well, what did you think I was going to do with all that money you sent home—spend it in riotous living?" demanded Aunt Maggie. "I finished paying for the house, and then I put in electricity and waterworks and some new furniture, and painted it—and made a deed out in your name."

Tears were very close and she finished tartly. "And now, for Pete's sake, cut out the weeps and come on in. I know you're worn out."

She unlocked the kitchen door. Since she made her trips to and from town, seven miles away, in the Betsy-Bug, and since the garage was at the back of the house, the front door was rarely used, and seldom even unlocked. Aunt Maggie led the way in and Cathy was properly impressed with the spick-and-span kitchen with its new electric stove and icebox and hot-water heater, the shining green- and cream-colored linoleum, the perky green percale curtains with the yellow tulips tumbling gaily over the background of green.

Aunt Maggie took her proudly through the house, and Cathy was deeply touched at the shining order, the freshness and undeniable charm of the little place.

"This is your room," said Aunt Maggie, and stood back to look at it. The cream-colored walls, the ivory woodwork, the honey-maple furniture, the glazed chintz drapery, the ruffled organdie looped back beneath them. "If you don't like it, we'll have it all out and start over again."

"Like it? I love it! You're a darling," said Cathy warmly. "Phooey!" said Aunt Maggie, once more her brisk, vigorous self. "Your clothes are in the closet—the stuff you left behind. Maybe you'd like to get out of that uniform and into something cooler. There's plenty of water for a hot bath. I can't get used to the fact that there's always plenty of water for a hot bath, with that electric heater in there. And I'll fix us some supper."

They had had supper and the dishes had been washed and put away, and Aunt Maggie and Cathy were on the wide, old-fashioned front porch when a car came swiftly from town and skidded to a stop at the gate. A man leaped lightly over the low gate and came running up the walk.

It was dusk, but Cathy would have known him in pitch-black darkness, even before he spoke. She sat very still in the green-painted porch glider, a dim figure in her pale blue linen frock. She could not have stood up or gone to meet him if her life had depended on it. Her knees seemed to turn to rubber, and her heart was beating so fast that her body seemed shaken with it.

"Cathy!" said Bill. His voice was little more than a choked whisper, yet to Cathy it was like a great shout that made her heart turn over. "Cathy—oh, my dearest—is it really you?"

He came to her, stumbling a little, and knelt beside her and drew her into his arms, holding her close and hard against him. Neither of them knew that at the first sight of him, Aunt Maggie had risen and left the porch. They had forgotten Aunt Maggie; they had forgotten everybody save themselves and each other.

There was a long, blessed interval. It might have been moments, it might have been hours; neither of them knew nor cared. It was enough that after long, long months of waiting, they were together again. But when at last he held her a little away from him and could look into her eyes, Bill asked sternly, "What was the idea of just slipping home and not saying a word to me, Cathy? Why didn't you let me know you'd be here today?"

"I sent you a wire from Atlanta yesterday," she told him.

She saw his brows draw together in a puzzled frown.

"You sent a wire? I didn't get it," he said then.

"I sent it to the house, thinking you'd be more certain to get it there than if it went to the mill."

A look of bitterness touched his face and he nodded.

"See," he said after a moment. "Bill, if she still—" Cathy said impulsively, but stopped herself before she could finish.

Bill grinned wryly. "She still would like to do my breathing for me, but since that is out of the question, she just tries to live my life for me," he admitted, and finished grimly. "It's quite a tug of war between us—but I think I'm holding my own."

For Saturday, November 22
THE emphasis is placed upon the personal rather than business activities, with social, artistic, domestic and affectional matters engaging the attention. And while such are the dominating idea and plan, it may not be predicated upon a sustained and serene state of the affairs or affections. Friction, inharmonious and want of smooth-running vocations or avocations demand definitely well-ordered and regulated conduct. Don't overlook tact, courtesy and consideration in menaced predicaments.

The Birthday Forecast

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of splendid openings for a cherished change of far-reaching consequence. There is token of promotion, preferment and excellent plans for change of long-term consequence. Yet the very suddenness of the advent might prove devastating and disruptive.

Keen analysis and appraisal of new conditions and environs before jumping headlong into regrets, is advised.

A child born on this day, may have an ambitious and aspiring nature, with excellent opportunities for reaching high places. However, such drastic changes and surprises may not measure up to expectations.

A well-ordered plan and program based on harmony, love and mutual understanding, with courtesy and consideration as active forces for well-being and happiness is needed.

A child born on this day although having a loving, and affectionate nature, with much talent in the fine arts and pleasure, yet may have undertones of contention and inharmonious calling for early discipline.

Aviation Men Worried
As Bad Weather Nears

Accidents Last Winter
Cost Lines 25 Million

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Federal and aviation industry officials are plainly worried as winter's foul weather, which resulted in a rash of crashes a year ago, comes whistling 'round the corner. Many safety aids have been installed since last year, but the situation is still fraught with peril.

Last winter almost broke the airlines. They lost about 25 million dollars in cancellations as accidents drove passengers to the railroads. This traffic was not won back until midsummer.

The government's instrument landing system has been installed at about 50 airports and some progress has been made on approach lighting. However, developments promised to assure reliable all-weather flying are still in the future.

Some reasons for this are: Government reluctance to permit use of ground-controlled approach, a landing system competing with the federal ILS system.

Lack of congressional appropriations for additional safety aids. Opposition of the railroads to federal financing of safety aids for one mode of transportation at the expense of another.

● STUMPER—Scientists are plagued with one of the most important problems of atomic energy since atomic power was discovered—what to do with radioactive waste?

So far, they've studied numerous methods of disposal, but no way has been found to get rid of the potential menace. Radioactive waste can't be placed in the ground, ocean, air or, apparently, any other place without becoming a threat to human life many years hence.

The reason is that radioactivity remains for years and the problem is to dispose of these atoms so that they will be sealed forever. Scientists have examined many types of cylinders. So far they have found none that they feel will withstand the test of time. Any cylinder that corrodes and eventually breaks apart poses dangers for future generations no matter where it may be placed.

AS GOES NEW YORK—

THE NEXT presidential election may be decided by the votes of two parties whose mere names are hardly known outside of the state in which they flourish. These are New York's American Labor and Liberal parties, both composed of parts of President Roosevelt's great following which did not care for the New York City Democratic leadership. They have developed considerable strength, most of it concentrated in Greater New York.

In 1944 President Roosevelt's vote on the American Labor ticket was 496,405, and on the Liberal ticket 339,235. As his plurality in the state was only 417,000, it is easy to see how greatly these secondary parties helped him.

Without the Roosevelt name at their head both parties fell off in the governorship election in 1946. But the American Labor party polled 425,000 votes and the Liberals 180,000, masses of votes well worth having. The Labor party is now rent by feuds between the left wingers, who are thought to include many Communists, and the right wingers, of whom the late Mayor La Guardia was the most conspicuous member. The most prominent Liberal is Adolf A. Berle, Jr., former assistant secretary of state. He says that the Liberals have just increased their vote by 30,000 over 1946, and his aim is for 400,000 votes in 1948.

The Liberals are expected to support President Truman. The American Labor Party's decision is unknown. Many influential Democrats do not want their support at all. On what these two parties do, New York's vote may depend, and it has often happened that as New York goes, so goes the nation.

NO MORE WALKING

THE END both of parking problems and of the need for human legs is seen in plans for modern many-storied office buildings with parking space arranged directly adjoining each office. The busy executive will arrive for work in his car, drive it up curling ramps to the next-to-office parking space, step out to his desk.

It's as logical to rest the car in the office building during business hours as to store it overnight in a garage attached to the house. Many modern homes give as much space to garage as to livingroom. If the car, like the cows of European peasants, is sheltered under the home roof, why not under that of the office? Automobile drivers have nearly lost the art of walking, anyway. To cut the exercise down still more is only a logical development of the machine age.

But what we wonder is why the car should be required "to drive up the curling ramps". Why not drive it into an elevator and out at the right floor? Let's be practical and complete about these matters!

Those Britishers certainly know how to make the most of a royal wedding.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

In the November 17 issue of "The C.I.O. News" appears a letter from Philip Murray, head of the C.I.O., addressed to all members of congress. This letter contains a program for the restoration of controls over the economy of the American people by the President. It favors what President Truman himself referred to as police state economics. Murray's program contains four points which I here quote:

"(1) Re-establishing price control and rationing of food, clothing, and other necessities of life.

"(2) Instituting a tax program to recapture speculative and excess profits.

"(3) Eliminating margins on the grain exchanges.

"(4) Conducting an all-out attack upon monopoly and its attendant artificial curtailment of production, creation of scarcity for profit, artificial spiraling of prices and general strangulation of our economy."

This issue was out and Murray's letter was in the hands of members of congress prior to the delivery of the President's speech. It is important to note that in his speech the President made 10 points. Compare Murray's four point program with Truman's ten point program:

"1. Authorize 'consumer rationing on products in short supply which basically affect the cost of living.'

"2. Authorize 'price ceilings on products in short supply which basically affect the cost of living or industrial production and to authorize such wage ceilings as are essential to maintain the necessary price ceilings.'

"3. Extend and strengthen rent control.

"4. Authorize allocation and inventory control of scarce cost-of-living commodities.

"5. Authorize regulation of speculative trading on commodity exchanges.

"6. Restore consumer credit controls and restrain inflationary bank credit.

"7. Extend and strengthen export controls.

"8. Continue authority to allocate transportation facilities and equipment.

"9. Provide measures to induce livestock and poultry marketing so as to obtain the most efficient use of grain.

"10. Allow the Agriculture Department to expand a program for encouraging conservation practices and authorize measures intended to step up foreign food production."

They look very close to each other. They look as though they had a common inspiration. The President, for instance, says:

"The harsh effects of price inflation are clear. They are felt by wage earners, farmers and businessmen. Wage earners are finding that bigger pay checks this year buy less than smaller pay checks bought last year. Despite generalities about high farm prices, the income of many farm families cannot keep up with the rising costs of the things they buy. Small businessmen are being squeezed by rising costs. Even those who are well off are asking: 'How long can it last? When is the break coming?'"

But the President does not say anywhere in his speech that his administration, operating by his decisions, is increasing inflation by purchasing scarce commodities for export abroad. The government still exercises priorities—"moral priorities"—namely that government orders come first. As long as that is so, inflation must continue while goods are scarce. In a word, as long as the government, by its economic policies and its purchases, makes

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WOMEN are often said to invite foot trouble by the shoes they wear. Whether this is true or not, the fact remains that painful feet are far more common among women than men.

A great many women have the idea that their feet would be "all right" if only they could get rid of certain bunions, calluses, or corns, and the doctor often has difficulty in explaining to them that, like pain, all such things are the result of foot strain and not the cause of it.

The First Step

Thus, the first step in the treatment of aching feet is to find the cause of the strain. Far more often than most people realize, strain and, hence, pain are due to some inherited abnormality in the structure of the feet.

Among these abnormalities, perhaps the first in importance is shortness of the first metatarsal bone. The metatarsal bones are those just behind the toes. Sometimes, what are known as sesamoid bones are present in the foot. These are loose bits of bone, but just why they develop is not known.

Short Heel Cord

Another abnormality is a short heel cord. This causes the ankle bone to turn outward. If the first metatarsal bone is short or is not retained in the normal position, the ankle bone may roll inward and the foot may turn outward. In such cases, the arches of the feet may be high.

An X-ray of the feet, taken from the side, will help to show these various abnormalities. Once an abnormal condition is detected, the best treatment can be carried out.

Treatment, of course, includes the wearing of the proper shoe. This should be a wide, flexible shoe with a narrowed-in portion around the heel. The heel of the shoe should not be more than one and one-half inches high. A felt, rubber, or soft leather pad may be put in the front part of the shoe to give support to the first metatarsal bone. Heat, massage, and stretching exercises will increase the flexibility of the feet, and help to overcome pain and other symptoms.

Surgical Removal

Bunions, if they are present, may be removed surgically. Many of these defects in the feet can be detected in infancy. In treating some of them, it may be necessary to put on a cast which is worn for several months. If the condition is severe, it may be necessary for the cast to be worn until the proper kind of shoe can be fitted.

Of course, the longer these foot defects are allowed to continue untreated, the worse the foot strain becomes, and the more difficult it is to correct the condition later on. Hence, it is important that the baby's feet be carefully examined and, if there is any indication of abnormalities, X-rays should be taken. Later on in life, the person must take care to wear the proper shoes, so that foot strain may be completely prevented.

SYNOPSIS

Cathy Layne, Army nurse, was disappointed when Bill Kendall, with whom she had been in love since childhood, failed to meet her when she arrived home on leave after long service in the Pacific. Aunt Maggie, with whom Cathy lived, disclosed that Edith Kendall, Bill's wealthy, arrogant aunt, had sent him on a short business trip and had undoubtedly failed to give him the telegram Cathy had sent announcing the time of her arrival.

CHAPTER TWO

"LOOK FAMILIAR?" suggested Aunt Maggie wryly, and jerked an inelegant thumb towards the house.

"Very impressive," said Cathy dryly.

"The Dowager Queen would be happy to hear you say that," said Aunt Maggie. "She's had herself a time throwing her weight around, with the mills all broke down, just about, with war contracts, and the town bursting at the seams with war workers. Folks say she's made so much money that it would take a coal scoop to handle it."

"That's nice," said Cathy.

"What wonders me," said Aunt Maggie as the Betsy-Bug scampered past the impressive fieldstone fence with its gridded iron gates. "Is how Bill stands living here. Like living in a jail—Oh, of course, with all modern improvements. But a jail just the same."

Cathy hesitated. "Well, I suppose he feels under obligation to her. After all, she did adopt him when he was fifteen, and gave him every possible advantage. And he and his mother had a terrible time."

"Sure, sure—but if Edith Kendall could be made to remember that Abe Lincoln freed the slaves," said Aunt Maggie.

Cathy laughed unsteadily. "Darling, I'm beginning to suspect that you don't like Mrs. William Kendall too much," she said teasingly.

"Like her? Does anybody?" snorted Aunt Maggie. "Anyway, she'd resent it furiously if anybody dared to like her. She's much too important to be liked. She wants to be like Ben Bolt. 'Sweet Alice'—she wants people to tremble with fear at her frown and weep with delight at her smile. She wants to be known as the Lady Bountiful of the Manor—provided she doesn't have to spend more than a dollar and a quarter befriending the poor."

The Betsy-Bug had left the yellow brick with its imposing grounds and was progressing steadily, if not speedily, a mile or so beyond, to where several cottages faced each other along the highway, each with its own garden plot and half an acre or so of farm land.

A neat white picket fence enclosed one of these. It was a trim white cottage, freshly painted, its deep in blossoming shrubbery, its walk and drive blazing with spring flowers, the orchard at the back hung with scarves of palest pink and creamy white.

Aunt Maggie turned the Betsy-Bug's blunt nose through the ate, drove along to the back of the house, and heaved a sigh of relief as she pried herself from behind the wheel.

"I'm either going to have to diet or stop trying, to drive," she said comfortably as she had said a thousand times before. "I starve myself, drop a few pounds—and then I laugh it back on again!"

"If you lose so much as an ounce, I'll—I'll sue you," Cathy threatened. "You're just exactly the way I want you, darling!"

"Then I'll make an apple pie for supper, with lots of cinnamon and sugar," said Aunt Maggie cheerfully, and put her arm about the girl and held her close. "It's good to have you home again, chick."

"It's good to be here, darling. I used to dream of the place—and of you," Cathy kissed the plump cheek and looked about her. "But you're terribly spruced up, darling. Fresh paint and the pickets all in the place."

"Well, what did you think I was going to do with all that money you sent home—spend it in riotous living?" demanded Aunt Maggie. "I finished paying for the house, and then I put in electricity and waterworks and some new furniture, and painted it—and made a deed out in your name."

Tears were very close and she finished tartly. "And now, for Pete's sake, cut out the weeps and come on in. I know you're worn out."

She unlocked the kitchen door. Since she made her trips to and from town, seven miles away, in the Betsy-Bug, and since the garage was at the back of the house, the front door was rarely used, and seldom even unlocked. Aunt Maggie led the way in and Cathy was properly impressed with the spick-and-span kitchen with its new electric stove and icebox and hot-water heater, the shining green-and-cream-colored linoleum, the perky green pleated curtains with their yellow tulips tumbling gaily over the background of green.

Aunt Maggie took her proudly through the house, and Cathy was deeply touched at the shining order, the freshness and undeniable charm of the little place.

"This is your room," said Aunt Maggie, and stood back to look at it. The cream-colored walls, the ivory woodwork, the honey-maple furniture, the glazed chintz draperies with the ruffled organdie loops back beneath them. "If you don't like it, we'll weave it all out and start-over again."

"Like it? I love it! You're a darling," said Cathy warmly.

"Phooey!" said Aunt Maggie, once more her brisk, vigorous self. "Your clothes are in the closet—The stuff you left behind. Maybe you'd like to get out of that uniform and into something cooler. There's plenty of water for a hot bath. I can't get used to the fact that there's always plenty of water for a hot bath, with that electric heater in there. And I'll fix us some supper."

They had had supper and the dishes had been washed and put away, and Aunt Maggie and Cathy were on the wide, old-fashioned front porch when a car came swiftly out from town and skidded to a stop at the gate. A man leaped lightly over the low gate and came running up the walk.

It was dusk, but Cathy would have known him in pitch-black darkness, even before he spoke. She sat very still in the green-painted porch glider, a dim figure in her pale blue linen frock. She didn't have stood up or gone to meet him if her life had depended on it. Her knees seemed to turn to rubber, and her heart was beating so fast that her body seemed shaken with it.

"Cathy!" said Bill. His voice was little more than a choked whisper, yet to Cathy it was like a great shout that made her heart turn over. "Cathy—oh, my dear—what is it really you?"

He came to her, stumbling a little, and knelt beside her, drew her into his arms, holding her close and held against him. Neither of them knew that at the first sight of him, Aunt Maggie had risen and left the porch. They had forgotten Aunt Maggie; they had forgotten everybody save themselves and each other.

There was a long, blessed interval. It might have been moments, it might have been hours; neither of them knew nor cared. It was enough that after long, long months of waiting, they were together again. But when at last he held her a little away from him and could look into her eyes, Bill asked sternly, "What was the idea of just slipping home and not saying a word to me, Cathy? Why didn't you let me know you'd be here today?"

"I sent you a wire from Atlanta yesterday," she told him.

She saw his brows draw together in a puzzle frown.

"You sent a wire? I didn't get it," he said then.

"I sent it to the house, thinking you'd be more certain to get it there than if it went to the mill."

A look of bitterness touched his face and he nodded after a moment.

"I see," he said after a moment. "Bill, if she still—" Cathy said impulsively, but stopped herself before she could finish.

Bill grinned wryly. "She still would like to do my breathing for me, but since that is out of the question, she just tries to live my life for me," he admitted, and finished grimly, "It's quite a tug o' war between us, but I think I'm holding my own."

THE emphasis is placed upon the personal rather than business activities, with social, artistic, domestic and affectional matters engaging the attention. And while such are the dominating idea and plan, it may not be predicated upon a sustained and serene state of the affairs or affections. Friction, inharmonious and want of smooth-running vocations or avocations demand a definitely well-ordered and regulated conduct. Don't overlook tact, courtesy and consideration in menaced predicaments.

For the Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may be disposed to devote themselves to the pursuit of pleasure, or to those forms of business catering to such loftier enjoyments and pastimes. There are indications of friction, inharmonious and disagreements in the home, in social affairs and in all manner of afflictions of the sentimental or cultural life.

A well-ordered plan and program based on harmony, love and mutual understanding, with courtesy and consideration as active forces for well-being and happiness is needed.

Aviation Men Worried
As Bad Weather Nears

Accidents Last Winter
Cost Lines 25 Million

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Federal and aviation industry officials are plainly worried as winter's foul weather, which resulted in a rash of crashes a year ago, comes whistling round the corner.

Many safety aids have been installed since last year, but the situation is still fraught with peril.

Last winter almost broke the airlines. They lost about 25 million dollars in cancellations as accidents drove passengers to the railroads. This traffic was not won back until mid-summer.

The government's instrument landing system has been installed at about 50 airports and some progress has been made on approach lighting. However, developments promised to assure reliable all-weather flying are still in the future.

Some reasons for this are: Government reluctance to permit use of ground-controlled-approach, a landing system competing with the federal ILS system.

Lack of congressional appropriations for additional safety aids. Opposition of the railroads to federal financing of safety aids for one mode of transportation at the expense of another.

STUMPER—Scientists are plagued with one of the most important problems of atomic energy since atomic power was discovered—what to do with radioactive waste?

So far, they've studied numerous methods of disposal, but no way has been found to get rid of the potential menace.

Radioactive waste can't be placed in the ground, ocean, air or, apparently, any other place without becoming a threat to human life many years hence.

The reason is that radioactivity remains for years and the problem is to dispose of these atoms so that they will be sealed forever. Scientists have examined many types of cylinders. So far they have found none that they feel will withstand the test of time. Any cylinder that corrodes and eventually breaks apart poses dangers for future generations no matter where it may be placed.

RED TOAST—Newsmen covering the Russian embassy's reception in honor of the October revolution which boosted Lenin to power chortled over a Soviet army officer's subterfuge.

Vodka and other alcohol flowed freely but the party was progressing dull. Then came the time for an all-out toast to "The Revolution."

The burly officer sidled up to a bartender with an empty glass. A brief conversation ensued. The bartender filled the glass with a sparkling liquid and returned it.

Came the toast. The Red officer downed the contents of his glass at a gulp and without a shudder. Probably for the first time the Revolution had been toasted in plain water.

Accordion Concert Pleases Local Audience With Varied Program

Artists Generous With Encores

Four professional piano-accordion concert artists were presented Friday evening in the auditorium of the Circleville high school under auspices of Business and Professional Women's club and members of the Circleville high school band.

The Rizzo accordion quartet opened the program with "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore" by Giuseppe Verdi, and "Ave Maria" by Victor Schubert. The fourth and last of the Collins series was received by an appreciative audience who enjoyed the varied selections played by Sally Dorn, Emanuel Quattuccio and Marion Johnson and Joseph Ranzini.

Emanuel Quattuccio played a solo arrangement of Dave Rose's "Holiday for Strings." His encore number was "The Parrot." Marion Johnson and Mr. Quattuccio in a duet played "Trees" by Kilmer-Alberti. Johnson expertly offered "Malaguena" from "Andalucia Suite" by the Cuban composer Lecuona. Her encore was the Gypsy love song, "Dark Eyes." The quartet played the "Pillgrim's Chorus" from the opera "Tannhauser" composed by Richard Wagner.

After a brief intermission the quartet opened the second half of the program with "Basso Ostinato" by Arensky, and the melodious air from "Suite in D Major" by Johannes Sebastian Bach. Miss Dorn played the lilt "Waltz in A Minor" by Frederick Chopin, then in a change of pace "Tea for Two" by Vincent Youngins.

Joseph Ranzini with Miss Dorn skillfully offered the tango "Jalousie" by Grade. Their encore was "Accordiana," which was announced as "a composition that every accordionist sooner or later learns to play."

The quartet completely captivated the audience with Victor Herbert melodies, "Last Re-again," "I'm Falling in Love With Some One" and "Gypsy Love Song." The audience insisted on encore after encore. In the concluding selections they played "Intermezzo" from Cavalleria Rusticana, and "Stars and Stripes Forever" by Philip Sousa.

Solos ranging from classical to semi-classical selections were played by each artist. Miss Johnson played "Jolly Cavallero," Mr. Ranzini, "Tiko-Teko" by Zequimha Abreau, and Miss Dorn, "Dizzy Fingers," which she dedicated "to a hitchhiker who wanted to go south but always went north." Cole Porter's popular "Begin the Beguine" played by Mr. Quattuccio brought the concert to a close.

Formal Wedding Performed In Laurelville

In the Methodist church of Laurelville, Thursday evening Miss Alice Naoma Hartsaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hartsaugh, Laurelville, was married to Victor D. Pontious, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Pontious, Amanda.

The Rev. S. C. Elsea, Circleville, and the Rev. Joseph A. Bretz, Adelphi, officiated for the ceremony at 7:30 p. m. before an altar laden with bouquets of white gladiolas and chrysanthemums and sprays of ferns flanked by two seven-branched candelabra.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white taffeta. The sheer yoke of the fitted bodice was outlined with a bertha collar, and had long sleeves ending in points over the wrists. The draped skirt terminated into a full train. Her fingertip veil of imported English illusion was caught to a taria of pearlized orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white rose buds and baby breath, centered with a gardenia and white net corsage.

Miss Kathryn Hartsaugh attended her sister as maid of honor in an American beauty taffeta gown, made on lines similar to the bride's. Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Delong, Hallsville, and Miss Marilyn Smith, Johnstown. They were gowned in Copenhagen blue taffeta frocks. All three attendants carried Colonial bouquets of white carnations and baby breath encircled with sheer white ruffling, and wore matching garlands in their hair.

Harold Bartholomew, Stoutsville, was best man. Groomsmen were Tom and Glenn Hartsaugh, brothers of the bride, and Harry Ross, Laurelville.

James Calvin presented a half hour period of pre-nuptial music on an old fashioned organ especially secured for the ceremony. Miss Hartsaugh, the bride's sister, sang, "I Love You Truly" and "Because."

Approximately 100 guests attended the wedding and reception which followed immediately in the church. The bride's table was centered with a tiered wedding cake surrounded by white burning tapers and greenery.

The bride donned a wine and brown costume when they left for a short wedding trip. The new Mrs. Pontious was graduated

Three Hostesses Entertain For Bride-To-Be

Mrs. Wayne Dye, Miss Harriet McGath and Miss Jean Howell were hostesses Friday evening in the latter's home on Reber avenue to honor Miss Edith Schleich, route 1, Williamsport. The party was a silver shower for the bride-elect of Warren G. Straley, route 2, Williamsport.

Streamers of pink and blue were suspended from the chandelier in the diningroom to the large table where the gifts were placed. Light from many white tapers cast a soft glow over the room. Games were played with prizes being won by Miss Jane Metzger, Miss Irene Seimer, Circleville; Mrs. Ross Straley and the honored guest, Williamsport.

Bouquets of chrysanthemums centered each table where a dessert course was served by the hostesses to Miss Loraine Stambaugh, Miss Ann Workman, Miss Seimer, Miss Metzger, Miss Mary Margaret Fohl, Mrs. Carl Wilkins, Mrs. Elmer Yeatts, Mrs. George Eitel, Mrs. Wayne Dye, Miss McGath, Miss Rosemary Mast and Mrs. Fred Howell, Circleville.

Guests from Williamsport besides Miss Schleich, were Mrs. Straley, Mrs. Leonard Schleich and Miss Dorothy Schleich.

THANKSGIVING IS THEME

Members of the Circleville WCTU met Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Charles Naumann, South Washington street, for their November session. Mrs. Lawrence Warner, president, opened the meeting with the group singing "America the Beautiful".

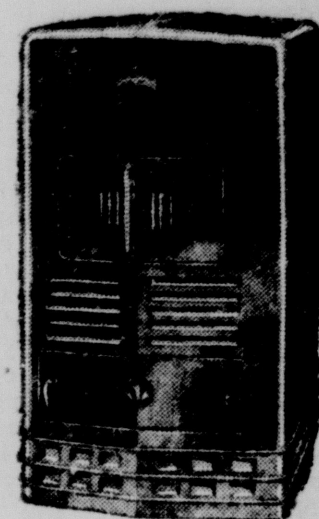

During the devotional period, Psalms were read by Mrs. Grace Wentworth. In connection with the theme she also read "Thanksgiving Day". Prayer was offered by Mrs. Ralph Long. The president conducted a short business meeting. Members voted to donate $3 to the Circleville Benevolent association for Christmas baskets. Plans were made for the annual Christmas party on December 19 in Mrs. Long's home on East Franklin street. At that time the group will have an exchange of gifts. Clippings of current events and happenings were read by Mrs. Durbin Allen, Mrs. A. V. Osborn and Miss Letha Beavers. Mrs. J. O. Eagleson sang "The 23rd Psalm". The hostess, assisted by her granddaughter, Mrs. Rosemary Hughes, served refreshments.

Accordion Concert Pleases Local Audience With Varied Program

Artists Generous With Encores

Four professional piano accordion concert artists were presented Friday evening in the auditorium of the Circleville high school under auspices of Business and Professional Women's club and members of the Circleville high school band.

The Rizzo accordion quartet opened the program with "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore" by Giuseppe Verdi, and "Ave Maria" by Victor Schubert. The fourth and last of the Collins series was received by an appreciative audience who enjoyed the varied selections played by Sally Dorn, Emanuel Quartuccio and Marion Johnson and Joseph Ranzini.

Emanuel Quartuccio played a solo arrangement of "The Rose" by Marion Johnson and Mr. Quartuccio in a duet played "Trees" by Kilmer-Alberti. Johnson expertly offered "Malaguena" from "Andalucia Suite" by the Cuban composer Lecuona. Her encore was the Gypsy love song, "Dark Eyes." The quartette played the "Pilgrim's Chorus" from the opera "Tannhauser" composed by Richard Wagner.

After a brief intermission the quartet opened the second half of the program with "Basso Ostinato" by Arensky, and the melodious air from "Suite in D Major" by Johann Sebastian Bach. Miss Dorn played the lilt "Waltz in A Minor" by Frederic Chopin, then in a change of pace "Tea for Two" by Vincent Youngins.

Joseph Ranzini with Miss Dorn skillfully offered the tango "Jalousie" by Grade. Their encore was "Accordiana," which was announced as "a composition that every accordionist sooner or later learns to play."

The quartet completely captivated the audience with Victor Herbert melodies, "Last Reunion," "I'm Falling in Love With Some One" and "Gypsy Love Song." The audience insisted on encore after encore. In the concluding selections they played "Intermezzo" from Cavalleria Rusticana, and "Stars and Stripes Forever" by Philip Sousa.

Solos ranging from classical to semi-classical selections were played by each artist. Miss Johnson played "Jolly Cavalero," Mr. Ranzini, "Tiko-Teko" by Zequimha Abreau, and Miss Dorn, "Dizzy Fingers," which she dedicated "to a hitchhiker who wanted to go south but always went north." Cole Porter's popular "Begin the Beguine" played by Mr. Quartuccio brought the concert to a close.

Formal Wedding Performed In Laurelville

In the Methodist church of Laurelville, Thursday evening, Miss Alice Naoma Hartsaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hartsaugh, Laurelville, was married to Victor D. Pontious, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Pontious, Amanda.

The Rev. S. C. Elsea, Circleville, and the Rev. Joseph A. Bretz, Adelphi, officiated for the ceremony at 7:30 p. m. before an altar laden with bouquets of white gladiolas and chrysanthemums and sprays of ferns flanked by two seven-branched candelabra.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white taffeta. The sheer yoke of the fitted bodice was outlined with a bertha collar, and had long sleeves ending in points over the wrists. The draped skirt terminated into a full train. Her fingertip veil of imported English illusion was caught to a tiara of pearlized orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white rose buds and baby breath, centered with a gardenia and white net corsage.

Miss Kathryn Hartsaugh attended her sister as maid of honor in an American beauty taffeta gown, made on lines similar to the bride's. Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Delong, Hallsville, and Miss Marilyn Smith, Johnstown. They were gowned in Copenhagen blue taffeta frocks. All three attendants carried Colonial bouquets of white carnations and baby breath encircled with sheer white ruffling, and wore matching garlands in their hair.

Harold Bartholomew, Stoutsville, was best man. Groomsman were Tom and Glenn Hartsaugh, brothers of the bride, and Harry Ross, Laurelville.

James Calvin presented a half hour period of pre-nuptial music on an old fashioned organ especially secured for the ceremony. Miss Hartsaugh, the bride's sister, sang, "I Love You Truly" and "Because."

Approximately 100 guests attended the wedding and reception which followed immediately in the church. The bride's table was centered with a tiered wedding cake surrounded by white burning tapers and greenery.

The bride donned a wine and brown costume when they left for a short wedding trip. The new Mrs. Pontious was graduated ed by Saltcreek township high school and Office Training school, Columbus. She has been employed in the office of the J. W. Eshelman mill, Circleville.

Mr. Pontious was graduated from Amanda high school and is engaged in farming north of Amanda, where they will make their home.

Out of town guests for the event were, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Smith and daughter, Marilyn, Johnstown; Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Frederick, Columbus; Mrs. Alfonso Scheerer, Canal Winchester; Mr. and Mrs. Don Reese, Mrs. Wayne Reese and daughter, Lancaster, and Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Calvin and son, Jim, Union Furnace.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Creglow, Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cryder, Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Starkey, Mrs. B. T. Hedges and Ralph Given, Circleville.

3 Grid Players Fined After Tiff

YANKTON, S. D., Nov. 22—Three Dakota Wesleyan football players were minus $165 today after paying fines levied in a Yankton, S. D., court on assault charges growing out of a flare-up in the Armistice Day Wesleyan-Yankton football game.

Donald Rose and Virgil Koskar, both of Cambridge, O., were fined $100 and $15, respectively. Theodore Mickle of Clinton, Ia., was fined $50 for his part in the fracas.

All three pleaded guilty to striking Referee Ed Simonich of Sioux City, Ia.; Yankton College Director Carl Youngworth and Onjoe Burgum, a spectator from Centerville, S. D.

The players had resented a ruling which nullified a Wesleyan pass completion near the Yankton goal. Yankton, which won the game, 13 to 7, severed athletic relations with the Mitchell, S. D., university as a result of the incident.

Pickaway Cage Aces Hold Leads

4 Teams Retain Unbeaten Status

Deercreek, Walnut, Pickaway and Ashville high school basketball teams clung to their unbeaten records in the Pickaway County cage league by virtue of victories Friday night. New Holland, defeated once, also returned to the win column.

Deercreek entertained Clarksburg and sent their visitors home on the short end of a 38-28 score.

Jim Picklesimer, eagle-eyed Deercreek forward who has been leading the league in individual scoring, tallied only four points while a teammate, Gerald Seymour, sent 11 points through the nets.

Walnut's 39-18 win came over Scioto in a game in which the winner dominated throughout. Bob Pontius paced the Walnut attack with 13 points.

PICKAWAY FOUND Perry a hard nut to crack. With quarter scores of 10-8, 15-15 and 26-23, it was not until the last frame that Pickaway was able to pull away safely to a 40-30 final verdict. Russell Ogan was kingpin among scorers with 18 counts.

Ashville found Monroe an easy touch as they notched a 57-34 final score. With all their men seeing action, Ashville was never challenged by the opposition.

Individual scoring honors went to Bob Bowshier of Monroe who tallied seven field goals and 4 free tosses for a total of 18 points.

New Holland's victory was a 53-16 rout of Darby. The winners clamped an effective blockade on the foe the last half, holding Darby to five points. At the same time, the winners were counting 28 points. High scorer for the game was New Holland's Glenn Thacker who netted 15 points.

Summaries of each game follow:

3 Grid Players Fined After Tiff

YANKTON, S. D., Nov. 22—Three Dakota Wesleyan football players were minus $165 today after paying fines levied in a Yankton, S. D., court on assault charges growing out of a flare-up in the Armistice Day Wesleyan-Yankton football game.

Donald Rose and Virgil Koskar, both of Cambridge, O., were fined $100 and $15, respectively. Theodore Mickle of Clinton, Ia., was fined $50 for his part in the fracas.

All three pleaded guilty to striking Referee Ed Simonich of Sioux City, Ia.; Yankton College Director Carl Youngworth and Onjoe Burgum, a spectator from Centerville, S. D.

The players had resented a ruling which nullified a Wesleyan pass completion near the Yankton goal. Yankton, which won the game, 13 to 7, severed athletic relations with the Mitchell, S. D., university as a result of the incident.

Pickaway Cage Aces Hold Leads

4 Teams Retain Unbeaten Status

Deercreek, Walnut, Pickaway and Ashville high school basketball teams clung to their unbeaten records in the Pickaway County cage league by virtue of victories Friday night. New Holland, defeated once, also returned to the win column.

Deercreek entertained Clarkburg and sent their visitors home on the short end of a 38-28 score.

Jim Picklesimer, eagle-eyed Deercreek forward who has been leading the league in individual scoring, tallied only four points while a teammate, Gerald Seymour, sent 11 points through the nets.

Walnut's 39-18 win came over Scioto in a game in which the winner dominated throughout. Bob Pontius paced the Walnut attack with 13 points.

PICKAWAY FOUND Perry a hard nut to crack. With quarter scores of 10-8, 15-15 and 26-23, it was not until the last frame that Pickaway was able to pull away safely to a 40-30 final verdict. Russell Ogan was kingpin among scorers with 18 counters.

Ashville found Monroe an easy touch as they notched a 57-34 final score. With all their men seeing action, Ashville was never challenged by the opposition.

Individual scoring honors went to Bob Bowshier of Monroe who tallied seven field goals and 4 free tosses for a total of 18 points.

New Holland's victory was a 53-16 rout of Darby. The winners clamped an effective blockade on the foe the last half, holding Darby to five points. At the same time, the winners were counting 28 points. High scorer for the game was New Holland's Glenn Thacker who netted 15 points.

24 Attending Irish Game

A busload of Circleville football enthusiasts left the city early today to attend the Notre Dame-Tulane grid game this afternoon in South Bend, Ind.

Sponsored by the Holy Name society of St. Joseph's church, the group included 24 persons. Plans call for their return soon after the game is completed.

Lamotta Fails To Be Irked By Suspension

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—Jake Lamotta, New York middleweight, was complacent today over his indefinite suspension by the New York State Athletic commission.

Nor was Lamotta irked by the commission's action in withholding his purse and that of Billy Fox, his opponent in last week's bout at Madison Square Garden. Said Jacob:

"I can afford to wait for my purse. They won't ever hold any benefits or collections for me."

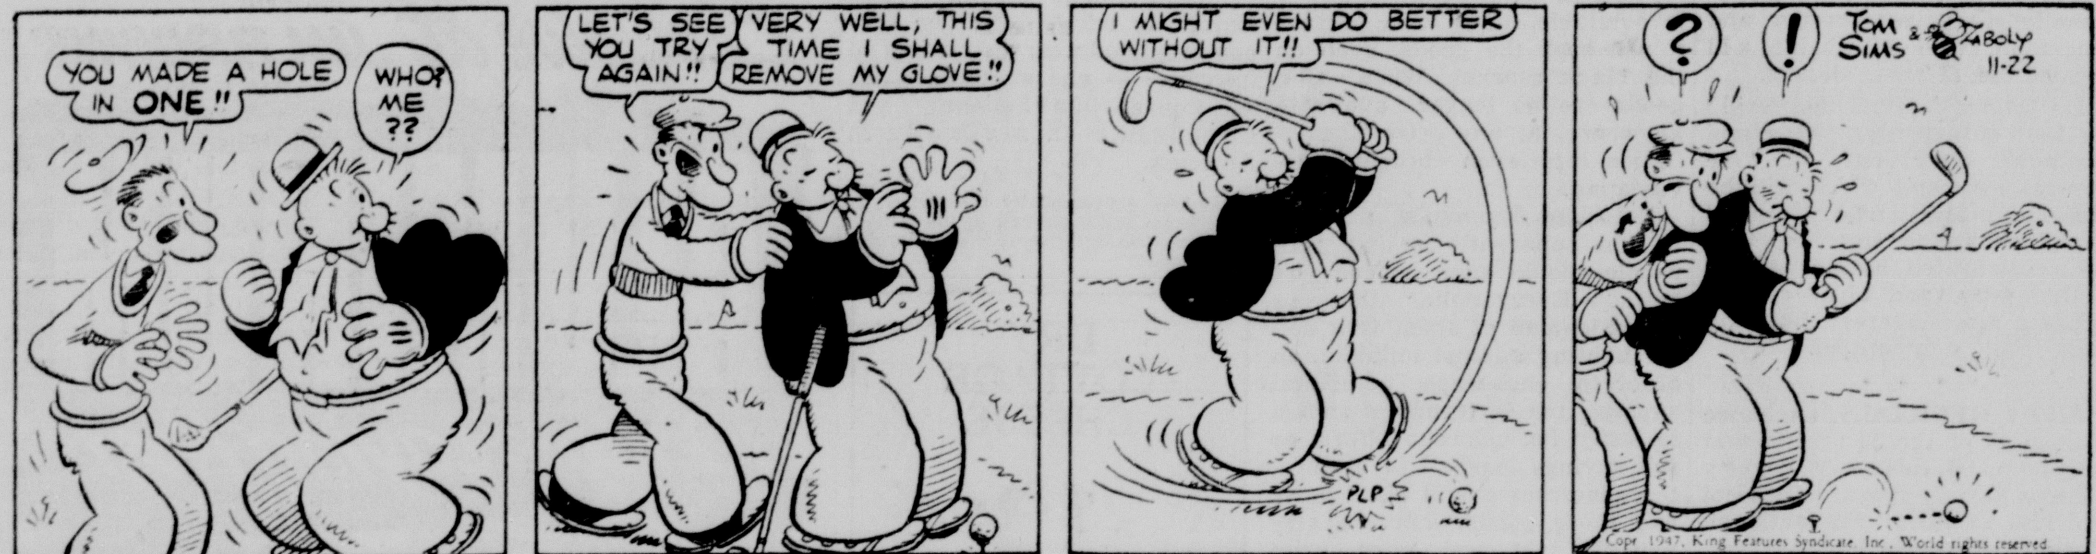

Fox, a Philadelphia lightweight, was not suspended. He was declared the winner by a technical knockout in the fourth round of the bout, although Lamotta preserved his record of never having been knocked off his feet.

Play Bridge With BARCLAY

ONE SHORT, OTHER LONG
AFTER one defender has shown length in certain suits, therefore shortness in the remaining ones, you know how to count his partner. He is bound to be long in the suits in which his partner is short, as simple subtraction from thirteen will usually show. When that mathematics has been applied, the declarer may see that a particular type of end-play, either squeeze or throw-in, will work against the second defender.

5 6 Dbl 5 NT Dbl
Pass Pass Rdbl

After the play West regretted his failure to take out into a 6-Diamond sacrifice, as the deal was one of his most expensive in quite a while considering what he could have saved.
East opened his singleton diamond J, the Q winning. North decided to treat East as having length in both majors, also the spade J. He scored the spade K, took the marked finesse of the 10, laid down the A, then led the club 3. When West held up the A, he came in with the K. Then seeking to build another club trick, he led the 2, which the Q won. Unable to return a club, East picked the heart 10.
North took that with the A, then laid down the diamond A, which squeezed East on the eighth trick. In his own hand North still had the spade Q-5, East holding the J-9, and in the dummy the heart K-Q-J-3, East clinging to the 9-8-7-6. Whatever East did now was sure to be wrong. If he threw a heart, the 3 would become good. So he did what was just as bad, discarded his spade 9. The spade Q then dropped his J, the 5 was good, and the heart K, Q and J took the last three tricks to give the declarer an extra.

Your Week-End Question
In what circumstances is it safe for one of the defenders to false-card while an early trick is being played?

Webber, Hollywood radio actresses, frequently heard on "The Whistler," Wednesday night CBS psychological breath-taker, are being hailed for their work in Orson Welles' movie production of "Macbeth" by insiders who have seen previews.

Annual Christmas Seal Campaign Set To Open Monday

$3,500 Goal Of TB Unit In County

80 Pct. Of Fund To Be Used Here

Completion of plans for the opening of the annual Christmas seal sale starting Monday were announced Friday by Mrs. Harry Graef, Pickaway county seal sale chairman.

The seal sale, to raise funds for the tuberculosis control program of the Pickaway County Tuberculosis Association, will begin with the mail delivery of seals to residents throughout the county and will continue until after Christmas.

The goal of the campaign is $3,500, the minimum needed to carry on the work of the association during the coming year.

"The Pickaway County Tuberculosis Association is one of 3,000 voluntary associations throughout the country affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association which will sell seals to finance a well organized campaign against tuberculosis," Mrs. C. E. Webb, executive secretary said.

"Of the money raised in this county, 80 percent will be used within the county to fight tuberculosis while the remainder will be forwarded to the Ohio State Tuberculosis Association. The state association will send five percent to the national association to help finance its services on a national level and will use the remainder for state services. Thus, of the total raised in our seal sale, 95 percent will be used within the state.

"For 40 years," she continued, "Christmas seals have been sold in the United States to help the battle against tuberculosis, a communicable disease which still kills 53,000 Americans a year. Confined to the area around Wilmington, Del., in 1907, the seal sale attracted so much attention that first year that the following year it was conducted on a national scale and has been nationwide ever since."

Attorney Knows Client's Feeling

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Nov. 22—John Walker, St. Clairsville attorney, could tell his clients with a certainty today the experience of being in jail.

Walker spent three hours in the Belmont county jail by mistake last night. The jailer who let him in to talk to one of his clients left work and forgot to tell his successor on duty of Walker's presence in one of the cells.

The new jailer turned off the communication system with the second-floor jail cells and Walker spent three hours shouting before he was heard by County Auditor W. T. McCourt from outside the building.

Plans Readied For Opening Of Big Livestock Exposition

CHICAGO, Nov. 22—Final preparations are being made for the opening of the nation's largest livestock show in Chicago next Saturday.

Show officials promise that the 1947 international livestock exposition and horse show, which will continue through December 6 in the international amphitheatre at the Chicago stockyards, will be one of the greatest in its 47 year history. Final returns on entries indicate that a number of departments will be larger and more impressive than ever.

Long known as the final court of judging for livestock this year's exposition is attracting from the furthestmost regions of the continent the finest farm animals that breeders and stockmen can produce. They will represent a vast area enveloping 32 states and six Canadian provinces.

Sixty-three well-known stockmen, packers, and agricultural college specialists from 18 states have the task of choosing winners among the expected 12,000 animals which will show here. Heading the judges' panel is Richard S. de Quincey, of Hereford, England, an internationally recognized breeder and stockman, who will judge all the individual steer classes.

De Quincey's final task will be that of selecting the grand champion steer out of the several thousand which will be exhibited. The international grand champion steer is the most celebrated bovine winner of the year, and the contest arouses more interest than any other show competition.

SHOW OFFICIALS announce that in 14 of the 30 breeds that are featured this year entry figures have surpassed those of the 1946 "victory" international, the previous record year.

Most significant gain over any previous show is in the cattle classes where increases in all four breeds total several hundred more than last year. These classes are in addition to the usual large exhibitions of prime cattle in carlot units and of junior steers shown by 4-H and FFA members.

Increase in six of the 11 breeds of sheep are also reported, and most significant in the swine classes are the phenomenal increases in Tamworth and Yorkshire breeds. Tamworth classes register a 400 percent increase over last year and Yorkshires are 500 percent over.

scarce goods scarcer, inflation must continue.

For what, after all, is inflation? It is the shortage of goods while those who desire or need the goods possess the purchasing power to obtain the goods at increasingly higher prices. As long as the purchasing power is available, those who possess it will seek the goods, even on the black market. When the goods are no longer available anywhere, at any price, the inflation may even become devastating.

President Truman's answer to that apparently is that the people should save instead of buy. "Every dollar that is saved instead of spent is a dollar fighting against inflation. In order to encourage additional savings, the Government should intensify its vigorous efforts to sell savings bonds." In a word, the government will issue more and more bonds, increase the national debt, and even print more paper money, secured by nothing—as a solution for inflation. He would solve inflation by inflation.

Annual Christmas Seal Campaign Set To Open Monday

$3,500 Goal Of TB Unit In County

80 Pct. Of Fund To Be Used Here

Completion of plans for the opening of the annual Christmas seal sale starting Monday were announced Friday by Mrs. Harry Graef, Pickaway county seal sale chairman.

The seal sale, to raise funds for the tuberculosis control program of the Pickaway County Tuberculosis Association, will begin with the mail delivery of seals to residents throughout the county and will continue until after Christmas.

The goal of the campaign is $3,500, the minimum needed to carry on the work of the association during the coming year.

"The Pickaway County Tuberculosis Association is one of 3,000 voluntary associations throughout the country affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association which will sell seals to finance a well-organized campaign against tuberculosis," Mrs. C. E. Webb, executive secretary said.

"Of the money raised in this county, 80 percent will be used within the county to fight tuberculosis while the remainder will be forwarded to the Ohio State Tuberculosis Association. The state association will send five percent to the national association to help finance its services on a national level and will use the remainder for state services. Thus, of the total raised in our seal sale, 95 percent will be used within the state."

"For 40 years," she continued, "Christmas seals have been sold in the United States to help the battle against tuberculosis, a communicable disease which still kills 53,000 Americans a year. Confined to the area around Wilmington, Del., in 1907, the seal sale attracted so much attention that first year that the following year it was conducted on a national scale and has been nationwide ever since."
